WHAT THIS RELIEF DOES

A provisional pardon or certificate of employability addresses employment and licensing barriers. It does not erase anything: the conviction remains on the record. A participant seeking erasure is on a different Connecticut route.
The Board of Pardons and Paroles application process is not a court filing; there is no prosecutor consent and nobody to serve. First check the supervision handoff below.

USE THE BOARD'S OWN PROCESS

Obtain and use the Board's own current application and instructions, and sign that application personally. This preparation guide and any intake worksheet are not the legal application and must not be submitted in its place.
If you are currently on probation with more than 90 days of supervision remaining, apply through your probation officer. If your supervision status or remaining period is unknown, verify it with your supervising officer before choosing the destination. Exactly 90 days does not satisfy this more-than-90-day handoff; it does not itself establish eligibility.
For the Board application route, use https://epardonportal.ct.gov/portal . Check current Certificate of Employability eligibility at https://portal.ct.gov/bopp/pardon-division/pardon/coe-eligibility .
Check the current required-document list at https://portal.ct.gov/bopp/pardon-division/pardon/coe-documents-required-for-certificate-of-employability . The Background Investigation Authorization is a supporting document, not the whole application. Take it unsigned to a notary and sign in the notary's presence. If under supervision, the supervising officer must complete the required questionnaire; do not complete the officer's answers yourself.
Fee: the Board's own Pardon FAQ (https://portal.ct.gov/BOPP/Pardon-Division/Pardon/Pardon-FAQs, as captured on 2026-09-08) says the Board of Pardons and Paroles does not currently charge a fee to apply for a pardon, and it names the Certificate of Employability, also called a provisional pardon, as one of its two pardon types. Confirm the current eligibility, timing, fee, and notice rules on the Board's portal before applying.
Gather the complete record and every conviction creating the employment or licensing barrier. Stop for counsel if the Board sets a hearing or any immigration issue exists.
